

Looking for a Healthy Solution to Missing Teeth? Consider Dental Implants

Missing teeth may be cute in small children, but many adults feel extremely self-conscious about their smile if they have experienced tooth loss. People are living longer lives in a more esthetically pleasing way, which are two good reasons to consider tooth replacement options. What many people are not aware of, is the impact that missing teeth may negatively have on your health.

When you lose a tooth, there is a small area on your jawbone that no longer needs to provide support because the tooth and the root structure is no longer present. Your jawbone begins to lose its strength and firmness without that support. This deterioration does not happen immediately, but it is a concern for anyone who has missing teeth. Tooth loss can actually change your facial structure.

Dental implants are tooth replacement solutions that can actually protect your dental health by simulating your natural tooth and tooth root structure.

A dental implant is a manufactured post that is designed to create a stable foundation for a natural looking tooth restoration. Placed directly into the jawbone, a dental implant is the closest thing to your natural tooth.

The base of the dental implant (the post) serves as a substitute for the missing tooth root structure. Dental implant patients can be secure in the knowledge that their dental health is safe.

Dental implants are very strong because of the method of placement. There is no problem with slippage, which means that you can eat and speak with comfort and confidence.

Looking at a smile with dental implants is like looking at a smile with natural teeth.
